

DID YOU HEAR THE ONE ABOUT...

The absolute best benefits, pension and investment jokes of the last 25 years. And one or two about our good friends down in HR.

An actuary, an underwriter and a group insurance salesperson are riding in a car. The salesperson has his foot on the gas, the underwriter has his foot on the brake and the actuary is looking out the back window telling them where to go.

Definition of a consultant: A person who, when you ask what time it is, asks if he can borrow your watch.

Economists have forecast nine out of the last five recessions.

An actuary is someone who wanted to be an accountant, but didn't have the personality for it.

Headline: "SEC says that securities convictions are expected to drop next year."

Translation: Jails are overcrowded, nowhere to put the violators.

Q: How many pension lawyers does it take to screw in a light bulb?

A: One; the lawyer holds it while the rest of the world revolves around him.

Definition of a computer: an actuary with a heart.

Q: Why do risk managers have such clear vision and foresight?

A: From the ivory tower, you can see forever.

Q: Have you heard about the regulator's word processor?

A: No matter what font you select, everything comes out in fine print.

Q: What is the difference between an introverted actuary and an extroverted actuary?

A: An introverted actuary stares at his own shoes during a conversation, while an extroverted one stares at the other person's shoes.

$100 invested at 7% interest for 100 years will become $100,000, at which time it will be worth absolutely nothing to you.

It was so cold the other day, a pension lawyer was seen with his hands in his own pockets.

Q: Why did God create economists?

A: In order to make weather forecasters look good.

Q: If you see a consultant on a bicycle, why should you never swerve to hit him?

A: It might be your bicycle.

Human resources speak:

HR speak: Pension plan.

Translation: We're scared to death that you're going to stay here past 60. Here's some money, please go away.

HR speak: Benefits plan.

Translation: If you become so incredibly unproductive that you're just filling space, we're sending you home.

HR speak: Competitive salary.

Translation: We are competitive because we pay less than the competition does.

HR speak: Join our fast-paced organization.

Translation: Training? No, get to work.

HR speak: Casual work atmosphere.

Translation: Nice suit! How did you afford that on your salary?

HR speak: Must be deadline oriented.

Translation: Nobody you work with can meet a deadline to save their life. You can though, right?

HR speak: Some overtime required.

Translation: Some time every night and some time every weekend. Some of your vacations will be work-free, if you're nice.

HR speak: Seeking candidates with a wide variety of experience.

Translation: You're not going to believe how many people used to do the job you're about to apply for.

HR speak: Problem-solving skills a must.

Translation: Please, please, please come solve our problems.

HR speak: Team-leadership skills required.

Translation: Please, please, please come do the work of a manager for the pay of a "team leader."

HR speak: Good communications skills.

Translation: We want you to fill in at reception over the lunch hour.

Sources: Jokes.com, Coolavenues.com, apl2000.com, ahajokes.com.